Putovanje je za mnoge glazbenike u prosvjetiteljskom 18. stoljeću bilo važan dio njihova života. Putovali su iz različitih razloga: školovanja, usavršavanja, koncertiranja, društvenih kontakata ili za poslenja. Dojmove, utjecaje, znanja i iskustva iz novih sredina često su utkali u svoju glazbu.

Jedan u nizu tzv. malih skladatelja koji su djelovali na prijelazu iz baroka u klasicizam bio je i Giuseppe Michele (Josip Mihovil) Stratico (1728-1783), skladatelj zadarskog podrijetla i grčkih korijena koji je djelovao u Italiji. U Padovi je studirao pravo od 1737. do 1745. te je u Sanguinettu (blizu Verone) od 1760. djelovao kao „vicario e giudice al maleficio“. Violinu i kompoziciju učio je kod uglednog violinista i skladatelja Giuseppea Tartinija, iako su dokazi o tome samo posredni. I Straticov skladateljski stil nosi značajke Tartinijeva violinističko-skladateljskog kruga. Koncert za dvije violine i gudače u D-duru (2) sadrži tri stavka s uobičajenim rasporedom tempa brzi-polagani-brzi. Skladan je u tradicionalnom baroknom stilu, kao concerto grosso, te donosi i primjere imitacije tematskog materijala među solističkim instrumentima po principu jeke. U tutti odsjecima iznosi se tematski materijal i uvrđuje tonalitet, dok solo odsjeci donose modulacije i veću mogućnost iskazivanja virtuoziteta solista.

Carl (Philipp) Stamitz (1745-1801) bio je vodeći član drugoga naraštaja manheimskih orkestralnih glazbenika. Cijenjen kao skladatelj, virtuoz na violini, violi i violi d'amore, mnogo je putovao. Tijekom 1770-ih redovito je nastupao u okviru Concerts spirituels u Parizu, jedne od prvih serija javnih koncerata te odlazio na koncertne turneje. Između 1773. i 1783. s uspjehom je nastupao u Frankfurtu, Augsburgu, Strasbourgu, Londonu, Haagu i Amsterdamu. Od 1785. koncertira u Hamburgu, Lübecku, Braunschweigu, Magdeburgu i Leipzigu. Narednih godina glazbena putovanja vodila su ga u Berlin, Dresden, Prag, Halle, Nürnberg, Kassel i Weimar.

In the Age of Enlightenment (the 18th century), travelling played a very important role in the lives of many musicians. They travelled for numerous reasons: education, specialisation, concert tours, social contacts, and employment. Consequently, they often inweaved impressions, influences, knowledge and experience gained from the new environments into their music.

Among the so-called Kleinmeister who composed in the transitional period from Baroque to Classicism was Giuseppe Michele (Josip Mihovil) Stratico (1728-1783), a composer born in Zadar of Greek ancestry who was active in Italy. He studied law in Padua from 1737 to 1745. He was active in Sanguinetto (near Verona) as „vicario e giudice al maleficio“ from 1760. He may have studied violin and composition with the renowned violinist and composer Giuseppe Tartini, although proof of this is only circumstantial. Stratico's compositional style shows the characteristics of Tartini's violinistic and compositional circle. Concerto a due violini obbligati in D (2), in three movements with the usual layout of fast-slow-fast, is composed in the traditional Baroque concerto grosso style. The thematic material within the solo instruments generally follows the echo principle. Tutti passages present thematic material and confirm the tonality, while the solo parts modulate as well as offering great possibilities to display the virtuosity of the soloists.

Carl (Philipp) Stamitz (1745-1801) was the leading member of the second generation of musicians in the Mannheim orchestra. This distinguished composer and virtuoso on the violin, viola and viola d'amore, travelled extensively. In the 1770s, he gave regular performances at the Concerts spirituels in Paris, among the first series of public concerts, and toured throughout Europe. Between 1773 and 1783, he gave successful concerts in Frankfurt, Augsburg, Strasbourg, London, The Hague and Amsterdam. From 1785 onwards he performed in Hamburg, Lübeck, Braunschweig, Magdeburg and Leipzig. In the following years, his musical travels took him to Berlin, Dresden, Prague, Halle, Nuremberg, Kassel and Weimar.

Sonata za traverso flautu, violinu i violončelo pripada zbirci od šest trija za flautu ili dvije violine i violončelo obligato, posvećenih barunu vitezu Thomasu Clargesu. Kao i mnoga druga njegova djela, karakteriziraju je neke tipične manheimske manire: mannheimski uzdah, građenje tema na rastavljenim trozvucima, primjena dinamike postupnih prijelaza te uporaba gotovo homofonske strukture.

Nakon smrti Johanna Sebastiana Bacha, njegov najmlađi sin Johann Christian Bach (1735-1782) živio je u Berlinu. Godine 1756. odlazi u Milano i stupa u službu imućnog mecene, grofa Agostina Litta, koji mu je omogućio studij u Bogni kod znamenitog teoretičara Padre Martinija, a potom je dobio mjesto orguljaša u milanskoj katedrali. Zahvaljujući operama i crkvenim djelima stekao je ugled i izvan granica Italije. Posebno mu je bila naklonjena engleska kraljica Sofija Charlotta, što mu je osiguralo službu u Londonu. U englesku prijestolnicu preselio se 1762. i započeo višegodišnju djelatnost u Kraljevskom kazalištu. Dvije godine kasnije s gambistom Carlom Friedrichom Abelom započeo je organizirati seriju javnih koncerata (tzv. Bach-Abel koncerti), koji su za London postali jednako značajni kao Concerts spirituels za Pariz.

Kvintet u D-duru, jedno od njegovih najomiljenijih djela, odlikuje se brzom izmjenom dionica i raskošnim melodijskim linijama. Ovo bi se djelo moglo nazvati kvintetom concertante budući da svaki instrument, posebice čembalo, ima po nekoliko prilika za solistički nastup.

Talijanski skladatelj, violinist, pedagog i glazbeni teoretičar Giuseppe Tartini (1692-1770) osnovnu glazbenu poduku stekao je u sjemeništima u Piranu i Kopru. Pravo je studirao u Padovi, a kompoziciju i violinu učio je u franjevačkom samostanu u Assisiju. Od 1714. bio je violinist opernoga orkestra u Anconi, a od 1721. prvi violinist i koncertni majstor u bazilici sv. Antuna u Padovi. Uz to je svirao na raznim glazbenim akademijama te gostovao u obližnjim

His Sonata for traverso flute, violin and cello comes from a collection of six trios for flute or two violins and cello obligato dedicated to Baronet Sir Thomas Clarges. As in his other works, it is characterised by several typical Mannheim mannerisms: the Mannheim sigh, themes built on broken chords, gradual dynamic shifts and nearly homophonic structures.

After the death of Johann Sebastian Bach, his youngest son, Johann Christian Bach (1735-1782), was living in Berlin. In 1756, he moved to Milan and entered into service of a wealthy patron, Count Agostino Litta, who paid for his studies in Bologna with Padre Martini, a distinguished theoretician. In 1760, Bach became organist at the Cathedral in Milan. He gained an international reputation owing to his operas and church compositions. Thanks to Sophie Charlotte, Queen of England, who showed great affection towards him, J. C. Bach was offered a position in London. He moved to the capital of England in 1762, and started his long-term activity at the Royal Theatre. Two years later, together with the gambist Carl Friedrich Abel, he organised a series of public concerts (the so-called Bach-Abel concerts), which became as important for London as the Concerts spirituels were for Paris.

One of his most favourite works, Quintet in D Major, is well known for its swift exchange of parts and rich melodic lines. This work might also be called a quintet concertante, since every instrument, in particular the cembalo, has several soloistic passages.

Giuseppe Tartini (1692-1770), Italian composer, violinist, music teacher and theorist, finished his primary music education at preparatory seminaries in Piran and Koper. He studied law in Padua and composition and violin at the Franciscan monastery in Assisi. In 1714, he became a violinist in the opera orchestra in Ancona; after 1721, he held the post of first violinist and orchestra leader at the Basilica of St. Anthony in Padua. He was further engaged at many music academies and in neighbouring cities, especially Venice. Between 1723 and 1726, he worked in Prague at the court of Count gradovima, osobito Veneciji. Između 1723. i 1726. djelovao je u Pragu na dvoru grofa Kinskog, a kasnije kraće vrijeme u Parmi. Po povratku u Padovu, pokrenuo je oko 1728. znamenitu violinističku školu, u koju su dolazili učenici ne samo iz Italije već i iz različitih europskih zemalja. Skladateljski opus uglavnom mu se sastoji od koncerata za violinu uz pratnju gudača te od sonata za violinu.

Sinfonia u D-duru navodi se i kao sonata a quattro, što su bila uobičajena onodobna terminološka preklapanja. U skladu s tadašnjom talijanskom praksom, odlikuje se zanimljivo oblikovanom melodijskom linijom i jasnom harmonijskom strukturom.

Ivan Jarnović (Giovanni Giornovichi; 1747-1800) bio je jedan od najistaknutijih violiniskih virtuoza druge polovice 18. stoljeća. Prema inačici njegova prezimena vjerojatno je njegovo hrvatsko porijeklo iako – čini se – nikad nije kročio na hrvatsko tlo, niti je na bilo koji način bio povezan s hrvatskim zemljama. Iako je najvjerojatnije bio francuski državljanin, zapravo je bio građanin Europe. Koncertirao je u svim najznačajnijim prijestolnicama kao što su Pariz, London, Dublin, Beč, Berlin, Stockholm, Kopenhagen i Petrograd. Prva potvrda o Jarnovićevim nastupima datira u 1773., kada je nastupio na Concerts spirituels u Parizu, a podudara se s objavlјivanjem njegova prvog violinskog koncerta.

Njegov trostavačni 14. violinski koncert najprije je bio objavljen kod francuskog izdavača Siebera 1790., a potom ga je preuzeo berlinski nakladnik Hummel te pariški Imbault. Jarnović je ovaj koncert s ruskim temama u drugom (popularna pjesma „Kao u našem širokom dvorištu“) i trećem stavku („Kamarinskaja“) izveo na svom londonskom debiju 1790., gdje je bio odlično prihvaćen. Tako je kritičar London Chronicle izvijestio je o oduševljenju publike i zaključio: „Bilo je nemoguće odoljeti smijehu čuvši suprotnosti ruske i talijanske škole“.

Kinski; subsequently, he spent time working in Parma. Upon his return to Padua around 1728, Tartini established his famous school for violinists, which took students from both Italy and abroad. His compositional output includes mainly concertos for violin and string orchestra and violin sonatas.

Sinfonia in D Major also appears under the name Sonata a Quattro; this was a common terminological overlap at the time. In accordance with the then-contemporary Italian practice, it has an interestingly shaped melodic line and a clear harmonic structure.

Giovanni Giornovichi (Ivan Jarnović; 1747-1804) was one of the most prominent and favoured violin virtuosi of the second half of the 18th century. It is presumed, according to versions of his family name, that he was of Croatian descent, although, it seems, he never set foot on Croatian soil or had any kind of connection with Croatian lands. Indeed, although he was probably French in terms of citizenship, he was in fact a citizen of Europe, giving concerts in its most important capitals (Paris, London, Dublin, Vienna, Berlin, Stockholm, Copenhagen, St. Petersburg, etc.). The first documented performance by Giornovichi occurred in 1773 on the Concerts spirituels in Paris, which coincided with the publication of his first violin concerto.

His Fourteenth Concerto, in three movements, was first published by the French publisher Sieber in 1790, and the publication was taken over by the Berlin publisher Hummel and, the Parisian Imbault. Giornovichi used Russian themes in the second movement (the popular tune „As in our large courtyard“) and again in the third („Kamarinskaja“). He performed the concerto at his London debut in January 1790, where it was very well received. The critic of the London Chronicle reported on the enthusiasm of the audience and concluded: “It was impossible to resist laughing at the contrast between the Russian and Italian schools.”
